

ABSTRACT

Photonic crystal sensors may be created from two and three dimensional photonic crystals by introducing defects. The localization of the optical field in the 5 defect region affords the ability to sense small volumes of analyte.